Carlo Burelli is a fellow at the Center for Advanced Studies Southeast Europe, University of Rijeka (CAS SEE UNIRI), where he works on a realistic theory of order, as the first virtue of political institutions. Previously, he had a two-year Post-Doc Fellowship in the ERC Project RESc EU where he investigated political conflicts and realistic forms of solidarity. He received his PhD in 2015 from Università Statale di Milano defending the thesis: “The Normative Power of Necessity: Making Sense of Political Realism”. In 2014, he was a visiting PhD at the University of Cambridge under Raymond Geuss. He has written on Political Realism, Solidarity and the philosophy of Thomas Hobbes.
