

Maurizio Ambrosini is professor of Sociology of Migration at the University of Milan, Department of Social and Political Sciences, chargé d'enseignement at the university of Cote d'Azur (France) and gives a course on Sociology of Migrations at the Italian campus of Stanford University. He is also the editor of the journal Mondi Migranti, and the Director of the Italian Summer School of Sociology of Migrations, in Genoa. His handbooks, Sociologia delle migrazioni, and Sociologia (with L. Sciolla) are adopted as the textbooks in many Italian universities. In English he has published Irregular Immigration and Invisible Welfare (Palgrave, 2013) and Irregular migration in Southern Europe (Palgrave 2018).

He is also Member of the Scientific Board of the Journal of Immigrant and Refugee Studies (since 2010 onwards) and of several Italian scientific journals. His research regards mainly irregular immigration, labour markets, migration policies at national and local level, transnational families. He is now committed as the head of the Italian unit in the European Project (H2020) MAGYC, Migration Governance and Asylum Crises. His articles have been published on leading international journals, such as Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, Ethnic and Racial Studies, Ethnicities, International Migration, European Journal of Migration and Law, Migration Studies.

He was Consultant of the Italian Parliament (Schengen Commission, 2006-2008); Member of the National Advisory Board for the Integration of Immigrants (2007-2008); and, more recently, in 2017 he was appointed as an Expert at the National Council of Economy and Labour (CNEL), where he leads the commission on Integration Policies for Foreign Citizens.

Maurizio Artero (PhD), University of Milan. Maurizio's main research interests are in the field of forced migration and urban refuge, as well as how social, legal and economic inequalities are rendered in urban space. His current research deals with practices and policies of refugees' reception and integration in Italy in light of the tension between local policies of exclusion, de-bordering initiatives by civil societies, and practices of "citizenship from below" by asylum seekers and refugees.

Senyo Dotsey (PhD) is a researcher at the University of Milan, with interdisciplinary research interests in international migration, African diasporas, rural and urban development in Africa.

Minke Hajer is a Post-doctoral Researcher at the University of Milan, with a general research interest in citizenship, irregular migration, social movements, and qualitative research methods. She currently works on a PRIN research project regarding de-bordering activities and citizenship from below of irregular migrants and asylum seekers in Italy. Her publications are on European Journal of Cultural and Political Sociology, Revista Interdisciplinar da Mobilidade Humana and Revue Européenne des Migrations Internationales. Forthcoming, with M. Artero and M. Ambrosini, Working with a Family: How a Family-oriented Welfare System Opens the Border for Migrant Care Workers (2021).

Ilaria Madama is Associate Professor of Political Science in the Department of Social and Political Sciences at the University of Milan, where she teaches International Political Economy and the Welfare State, EU Politics and Work-family Balance Policies. She coordinates the academic minor program in "Diritti, Lavoro e Pari Opportunità – DiLPO" (Rights, work and equal opportunities) and the EuVisions Observatory (www.euvisions.eu). She is a member of the faculty of the PhD program in Political Studies, University of Milan (2011 - on going), and of the Scientific Committee of the Italian branch of the European Social Policy Network, ESPAnet-Italia.

Her principal research areas are EU social governance and comparative social policy, with an interest in the political and institutional dynamics behind the development and reform of benefits, regulations and services across European countries in the fields of minimum income protection, social inclusion and work-life balance. Recent publications: "Compliance, gatekeeping o affermazione della sovranità nazionale? Risultati e limiti di Europa 2020 nella lotta alla povertà”, in Politiche sociali / Social policies (2019, with M. Jessoula); “Innovating Long-term Care policy in Italy from the bottom: Confronting the challenge of inclusive local care environments in Lombardy and Piedmont”, in Investigaciones Regionales / Journal of Regional Research (2019, with F. Maino and F. Razetti 2019); Fighting poverty and social exclusion in the EU. A chance in Europe2020, Routledge (2018, with M. Jessoula, eds).

Beatrice Magni is Associate Professor of Political Philosophy, Deputy-Director of Bdl - Biblioteca della Libertà, the on line peer-reviewed journal of the Centro di Ricerca L. Einaudi (Turin). Bdl is included within the top-rate journals for the research area of Political Philosophy in Italy. He was Director of the La.B. (Laboratorio di Bioetica) at Centro Einaudi, since 2010 to 2020. Her main research interests are: Normative Political Theory; Theories, Problems, and Practices of Pluralism; Theories of Conflict and Compromise; Gender Studies, Ethics and Bioethics. Her latest publications are Machiavelli. Sette saggi di teoria politica (Milano, Mimesis, 2018), and Hannah Arendt et la condition politique (Paris-Turin, L’Harmattan, 2019).

Franca Maino is Associate professor of Political Science at the Department of Social and Political Sciences of the University of Milan, where she teaches Social and Labour Market Policies, Healthcare and LTC Policy and The Welfare State and Social Innovation. She is the Director of the Observatory on Percorsi di secondo welfare (www.secondowelfare.it). She is member of the Editorial Board of the Journals Rivista Italiana di Politiche Pubbliche and Stato e Mercato. Her recent publications concern the transformation of the welfare state and the emergence of a new welfare mix that enhances the contribution of public, for-profit sector and the third sector. She co-edits (with Maurizio Ferrera) the Biennial Reports on Second welfare in Italy. Her most recent book is Fare rete per fare welfare. Dalle aziende ai territori: strumenti, attori, processi (Giappichelli, 2019, with Federico Razetti).

Chiara Mellace, Master’s Degree in Philosophical Science, Vita-Salute San Raffaele University of Milan, wrote a dissertation thesis on white-collar criminal and psychopath. Master course in Forensic Psychopathology and Criminology, Vita-Salute San Raffaele University of Milan, wrote a thesis on use and misuse of Socially Assistive Robots.

Federico Razetti is postdoctoral researcher at the Department of Social and Political Sciences of the University of Milan where he is involved in InnovaCAre, a multidisciplinary research project on social innovation in Long-term Care policies for the elderly. Since 2014, he has been working at Percorsi di secondo welfare. His research interests focus on social innovation, health policy and politics, occupational and company-based welfare, multilevel governance. He has published Fare rete per fare welfare. Dalle aziende ai territori: strumenti, attori, processi (Giappichelli, 2019, with Franca Maino).

Francesco Testini is a PhD Student in Political Studies at the Department of Social and Political Sciences of the University of Milan. He works on several methodological and foundational issues in political philosophy, with a focus on the relevance of empirical insights for normative inquiries. He spent research periods abroad at the University of Oxford and the University of Southampton. His contributions appeared in journals such as Parliamentary Affairs, The European Journal of Political Theory and Res Publica.

Guido Travaini, Degree in Law, University of Milan and Specialization in Clinical Criminology at the University of Milan. PhD in Criminology at the University of Bari (Consortium of the University of Trento). Senior Researcher for the disciplinary sector MD 43 (Forensic Medicine) and Professor of Criminology at the San Raffaele Life and Health University. Adjunct Professor of Criminology Franklin University Switzerland.

Claudia Zilli currently works as a Postdoctoral Researcher at the University of Milan for the European project MigrAID “Educating Social Partners Towards Ethnic Diversity in SMEs” and the CARIPLO project InnovaCAre “Enhancing Social Innovation in Elderly Care: Values, Practices and Policies”. In 2015 she obtained the PhD in Sociology from the University of Milan after discussing a thesis on intercultural/international mixed marriages in Italy. Her research interests and areas of expertise lie within the study area of Sociology of Migration and Intercultural Processes, analyzing multidimensional processes of integration of different migrant categories; the social and political relevance of new types of multiethnic/transnational families; and the development of diversity management strategies and practices. Her publications: on Journal of Applied Social Psychology, Cuadernos de trabajo, Rivista Missioni Consolata, and, as Editor for OECD, Promoviendo el desarrollo de sistemas locales de innovación. El caso de Medellín, Colombia.