

Jonathan Zeitlin is Distinguished Faculty Professor of Public Policy and Governance, University of Amsterdam, and Director of the Amsterdam Centre for Contemporary European Studies – ACCESS EUROPE. His current research focuses on new forms of ‘experimentalist’ governance within and beyond the European Union. For the past dozen years, he has studied the coordination of EU social, economic, and employment policies. He has published extensively on these issues, and frequently serves as a speaker, advisor, and evaluator for EU institutions. His latest edited book, Extending Experimentalist Governance? The European Union and Transnational Regulation, will be published by Oxford University Press in July 2015.
