

Heather Alexander is the Coordinator of Canada's International Development Research Centre's (IDRC) Research Chairs Network on Forced Displacement and an expert on refugee law, forced displacement, and statelessness. Her academic work focuses on statelessness among nomadic and mobile peoples, legal identity, refugee law, and climate change. She has a PhD in law from Tilburg University in the Netherlands. She was an Associate Protection Officer for UNHCR in Chad and Sri Lanka. She has served as a consultant for UNHCR, the US State Department, the University of Melbourne and the GlobalCit project at the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies. She is also a former US Peace Corps volunteer in Gabon and a co-founder of United Stateless, an advocacy group for stateless people in the USA.

Camilla Barbieri is a PhD candidate in Ethics and Political Theory at the University of Piemonte Orientale (Italy) within the FINO Consortium. She held a visiting position at the London School of Economics (Department of Government). Her research interests include theories of territorial rights of states and the justification of states' sovereignty.

Rita Ogochukwu Ezugwu is a PhD candidate at the University of Genova within the FINO Consortium. She won a Ph.D. scholarship funded by the European Union within the framework of the Cloe project. As a PhD candidate, she held visiting positions at the University of Girona, Spain, Central European University, Austria, and Eurac Research. Her research interests lie in normative political philosophy, particularly territorial rights and justice. Her recent work has appeared in the Journal of African Studies and Sustainable Development.

Chiara Molinero has a background as historian and she is now a PhD candidate in Sociology and Migration within the Cloe project at the University of Genova (MSCA Cofund). She held a visiting position at the Instituto de Investigaciones Históricas (IIH-UO, UNAM Mexico). She is interested in oral and environmental history, HGIS, colonial and decolonial studies.

Rudolph Nyamudo is a doctoral student at University of Pretoria in South Africa. In 2012, he completed his undergraduate degree in Philosophy at Arrupe Jesuit College, which was then joined to University of Zimbabwe. From 2014 to 2017, he studied Theology at Hekima University College, Catholic University of Eastern Africa in Kenya. After taking his undergraduate degree in Theology, he joined University of South Africa to study for his Master's degree in Philosophy. He has been researching on ethics and political philosophy. He has engaged African philosophy, the ubuntu ethic, with the problems of poverty and migration. In his doctoral research, a project that he submits at the end of August this year, Rudolph is studying normative ethics under the supervision of Professor Thaddeus Metz and Dr. John Sanni. Recent publication: "Naming and the Relegation of Poor Migrants: An Ubuntu Appraisal", Glocalism: Journal of Culture, Politics and Innovation, (2023).

Francesco Pallante is full professor of constitutional law at the University of Turin and a member of the Italian Association of Constitutionalists (Aic). He is on the editorial board of Italian and foreign legal journals and participates in the Legal Council of the Italian General Confederation of Labour (Cgil). He is a columnist for the newspaper il manifesto. His research and writings centre around such topics as the validity foundation of constitutions, unwritten law, constitution-making processes, parliamentary representation, the connection between social rights and financial constraints, the contrast of social inequalities, and regional autonomy. Pallante has also published Il neoinstituzionalismo nel pensiero giuridico contemporaneo (2008); Lineamenti di Diritto costituzionale (2014, with Gustavo Zagrebelsky and Valeria Marcenò); Loro diranno, noi diciamo: Vademecum sulle riforme istituzionali (2016, with Gustavo Zagrebelsky); Per scelta o per destino: La Costituzione tra individuo e comunità (2018); Contro la democrazia diretta (2020); Elogio delle tasse (2021); and Frammenti d'Italia: Le regioni come minaccia all'unità del Paese (2024).

Laura Santi Amantini is a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Piemonte Orientale. Previously, she received a short-term postdoctoral grant from the Society for Applied Philosophy. She received her PhD in Philosophy from the University of Genoa in 2021. During her doctoral research, she held visiting positions at the University of Bristol and the Refugee Studies Centre of the University of Oxford. Her research interests lie in normative political philosophy, particularly in the ethics of migration. Her previous work has appeared in the Journal of Social Philosophy, Res Publica, Global Justice: Theory Practice Rhetoric, and La Società degli Individui.

Jonathan Simon is an assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy at the Université de Montréal (UdeM) and an affiliate of the Centre de Recherche en Ethique (CRE), the Groupe de Recherche Interuniversitaire sur la Normativité (GRIN), the NYU Global Institute for Advanced Study Project on Space, Time and Consciousness, and the Canadian Metaphysics Collaborative. His primary research is in the philosophy of consciousness. He also has research interests in the philosophy of artificial intelligence, the metaphysics of science, applied ontology, moral psychology, value theory, and legal and political philosophy.