

Marco Biasi is Lecturer of “Labor Law” at the University of Milan. He is Teaching Fellow of “Comparative Industrial Relations Law” at Bocconi University in Milan, where he completed his Ph.D. in 2013. He was Visiting Professor at Cornell University from July 2015 through September 2015, Post-Doc Research Fellow at Ca’ Foscari University in Venice from 2014 through 2015. He was visiting Ph.D. candidate at the Friedrich Schiller Universität in Jena (from March 2012 through August 2012). Biasi was the recipient of the Lincean Academy’s 2014 Francesco Santoro-Passarelli Prize for the “Best debut book by a Labour Law Scholar in 2012-2013” due to his first monographic work on employee involvement from a comparative perspective, based on the German, European, and Italian experiences. Additionally, he edited with Professor Zilio Grandi of Ca’ Foscari University an extensive commentary on the “Jobs Act” Reform of the Italian labor market and a commentary on labor in firm networks, both published by Cedam (respectively, in 2016 and 2015). He is currently finalizing a monographic work on wrongful dismissal in Italy.
