

Veronica Alleghetti, sociologist, is a research fellow at the Department of Cultures, Politics and Society, University of Turin. She works on food poverty, foodscape analysis, social representations of food and food politics, with a spatial approach in urban areas. She is currently involved in research projects of both national and international scope. Her most recent publications include "Foodscape e strategie di sopravvivenza: il caso torinese" (forthcoming) in Urban and Rural Sociology; "Sustainable Food Consumption. Social Representations of Definitions, Drivers and Obstacles" (with Carlo Genova, in Sustainability).

Marco Danesi, Deputy Director of the Diocesan Caritas of Brescia, has worked in the psychiatric field in the coordination of services and in the training of operators. From 2005 to 2019, he was a contract teacher of the university course for Professional Educators "Planning, evaluation and organization of educational interventions" at the State University.

Anna D'Ascenzio is currently a third-level researcher on the project at the Institute for Research on Sustainable Economic Growth (IrCRES) in "Ageing Well in an Ageing Society: A novel public-private alliance to generate socioeconomic, biomedical, and technological solutions for an inclusive Italian ageing society". She has obtained a Degree in Communication Sciences (LM-20) and a Master's Degree in Territorial Policies and International Cooperation (LM-62). In 2017, she completed a PhD in General Sociology and Political Sociology. She is a member of the Degree Programme Board for Planning, Administration, and Management of Social Policies and Services (LM-87) at University of Naples "Suor Orsola Benincasa, where she teaches the follow courses: Social Research Methodology and Emancipatory Social Research Methodology. She adopts an interdisciplinary and mixed-methods approach, primarily focusing on a theoretical analysis of expertise applied to governance of territories and populations. For the publisher Mimesis, she has published the monograph Il volontariato dopo lo Stato Sociale. Discorsi e pratiche (2022). Together with Stefania Ferraro, she edited Solidarity Bodies. Workfare and Volunteering Policies (2019); with Fabrizio Greco, she co-edited Un racconto sul lavoro formale. Mercato, cultura e governamentalità ieri, oggi e domani (2021).

Carolina David, President of the Red Cross - Brescia Committee. Instructor of International Humanitarian Law, Qualified Advisor to the Armed Forces, scholar of the History of the Red Cross and Medicine. Participant in the Poverty Table established by the Municipality of Brescia representing CRI Brescia.

Caterina De Benedictis holds degrees in Sociology and Methodology, Organization and Evaluation of Social Services from the University of Trento. She is a research associate at EURICSE, where she works with a focus on social economy and 'enterprising communities'. She is currently attending the PhD in Contexts, Environments and Lifestyles for Health and Wellbeing at the University "Kore" of Enna, with a focus on sustainable development in rural areas (e.g., social agriculture, energy communities, community entrepreneurship). She has been working on issues related to the socio-economic development of the Southern Italy and has had several professional experiences in the field, from Siracusa to Casal di Principe, which later resulted in a research activity conducted in collaboration with SVIMEZ on the topic of reuse for social purposes of property confiscated from organized crime. Among her latest publications: "Le imprese di comunità in Italia. Tratti distintivi e traiettorie di sviluppo" (with J. Sforzi, A. Spalazzi, L. Bettani, S. Scarafoni, in Euricse Research Reports, 2024).

Laura Drera works on participatory design connected with generative community welfare, designer on circular economy issues and project manager of Dispensa Sociale of Maremosso association, a volunteer organization.

Renata Lizzi is Associate Professor in Political Science. Main fields of research are: public policies, policy making, governance arrangements, interests groups in Italy; food, and agricultural policy. More recent publications are: "The Necessary Reorientation of Italian Energy Policy" (with Andrea Prontera, in Contemporary Italian Politics, 2023); "The Implementation of NRRP Policies between Politics and Policy. An Interest Group Perspective" (with Luca Germano, in Contemporary Italian Politics, 2023); "How Scholars Break Down ‘Policy Coherence’: The Impact of Sustainable Development Global Agendas on Academic Literature”, (with M.S. Righettini, in Environmental Policy and Governance, 2021); Agri-Food Policy, in H. Harris et al. (eds), The Palgrave Encyclopedia of Interest Groups, Lobbying and Public Affairs, Palgrave Macmillan (2020).

Chiara Lodi Rizzini is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Department of Social and Political Sciences at the University of Milan and a researcher at the Laboratory Percorsi di secondo welfare. She earned a PhD in Sociology, Organizations and Cultures from Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore in Milan. Her principal areas of work are housing, poverty, and local welfare innovation.

Ilaria Madama is Professor of Political Science at the Department of Social and Political Sciences, University of Milan. Her main research areas are EU social governance and comparative social policy, with an interest in the political and institutional dynamics behind the development in the fields of minimum income protection, social inclusion, and family policy. Among her recent publications: The politics of European Food Aid Policy from Delors to Von Der Leyen (Palgrave MacMillan, 2025); “Unpacking the globalization-welfare nexus: A meta-analysis of comparative evidence, mechanisms, and effects of openness on social spending” (with M. Giuliani, in Journal of European Social Policy, 2025).

Franca Maino is an Associate Professor in the Department of Social and Political Sciences at the University of Milan and serves as the Scientific Director of Percorsi di secondo welfare. She also holds the position of President of the Fondazione Ufficio Pio in Turin. Her main research interests include the welfare state and comparative social policy, with a focus on recent welfare transformations, the role of non-public actors, and policies aimed at combating poverty.

Francesca Megni, Specialist Social Worker, head of the Social Service West area of the Municipality of Brescia, professor of Social Work Methodology, degree course in Social Service Sciences at the Catholic University of Brescia. Expert in Community Welfare.

Luigi Moraschi, Community facilitator, deals with building territorial networks with the aim of sharing resources and enhancing the skills of associations and volunteers. Vice President of Cauto social cooperative and on the board of directors of the national consortium Idee in rete.

Maria Stella Righettini is Associate Professor in Public Policy (Department of Political Science, Law and International Relations). Director of the II Level Master Course on “Policy Innovation, Design and Evaluation” (PISIA) at the University of Padova. Main fields of study and research are: governance, governance of environmental issue, sustainability policies, food security, local food policies. Recent publications: The Governance of Food Security. Building Collaborative Learning and Trust from the Street-level in Turbulent Time, Palgrave (2025, forthcoming); Introduction to Special issue, “Cybersecurity as a Policy” (in RIPP, 2024, et. al.); “Policy Learning from Crises: Lessons Learned from the Italian Food Stamp Programme” (with S. Busetti, in Policy & Politics, 2023); “Designing Integrative Governance Arrangements for Policy Performance in Energy Union: Evidence from Seven Member States” (with G. Bazzan, Journal of Environmental Policy and Planning, 2022); “Exploring Food Security as a Multidimensional Topic. Twenty Years of Scientific Publications and Recent Developments” (with E. Bordin, in Quality & Quantity, 2022).

Silvia Scarafoni is a first-year PhD Student in Legality, Political Cultures and Democracy at the University of Perugia. She graduated in Design of Social Policies (University of Perugia) and she holds a first-level Master’s degree in Design and Management of Participatory Policies and Processes (University of Perugia) and a second-level master’s program in Internal Areas. Rebirth after natural disaster: designing with communities (University of Camerino). She works as research assistant at Euricse for the ‘Enterprising Communities’ project and her research interests mainly focus on tools participation and active involvement of citizens, the relationship between local community and territory, and the development of inland areas. Among her main publications: “Le imprese di comunità in Italia. Tratti distintivi e traiettorie di sviluppo” (with J. Sforzi, A. Spalazzi, L. Bettani, in Euricse Research Reports 2024).

Jacopo Sforzi is a senior researcher at Euricse. He holds a degree in Political Science (University of Florence) and a PhD in Economic Sociology (University of Brescia), with a thesis dedicated to the role of institutions and social capital in local development processes of rural areas. After working as a researcher at the School on Local Development (University of Trento) on a research project on the cooperative phenomenon and rural development in Eastern European countries, in 2010 he began his collaboration with Euricse as a post-doc researcher, with a research project on the role of cooperative banks in local development. His research interests focus mainly on local development, rural development policies and local institutions, with an emphasis on cooperatives, public-private partnerships, shared administration and the different models of community-based organizations in the management of goods and services of general interest. His latest publication: “Local Action Groups and Community-Based Enterprises: Fostering Aggregation and Local Development towards a Long-Term Vision for Rural Areas” (with A. Spalazzi, A. de Renzis, in Scienze Regionali, 2024).

Alessia Toldo, geographer, type B researcher at the Department of Cultures, Politics and Society, University of Turin, where she teaches Land Policy and Sustainability and International Cooperation for development. She works on food systems and food policies, sustainability and social justice from an intersectional perspective. She works, in particular, on issues of food access, alternative food styles, and care, areas on which she is currently engaged in national and international research projects. Among her most recent publications “Eating at school: on children, biopower and care in Turin, Italy” in Children's Geographies; “Food Poverty, Right to Food and Local Food Policies: First Critical Reflections” (with Veronica Allegretti, Sabrina Arcuri and Maurizio Pierri, in Rivista Geografica Italiana).