

Francesca Arcostanzo is a Ph.D. student in Political Studies at the Graduate School in Social and Political Sciences in Milan, with a research project on The European Public Sphere: Exploring social media as an arena for public debate. In this regard she is as well an internal collaborator within the REScEU project (Reconciling Social and Economic Europe: Values, ideas and politics), directed by Maurizio Ferrera (University of Milan) and funded by the European Research Consortium. She has a BA in Social Sciences for Cooperation, Development and Peace at the University of Milan (2011) and a MA in Government and Public Communication obtained at the LUISS "Guido Carli" University in Rome (2014). Research interests: SNS, Public opinion, Political communication, Electoral behaviour.