

Ilaria Madama is Assistant Professor at the Department of Social and Political Sciences, University of Milan. Her research interests focus on comparative welfare state research and in particular on social inclusion and labour market policies. She has recently published “Understanding convergence and divergence: old and new cleavages in the politics of minimum income schemes in Italy and Poland” (with M. Jessoula, J. Kubisa, M. Zielenska, in Journal of International and Comparative Social Policy, 30/2, 2014); “Minimum income: the Italian Trajectory. One, no one and one hundred thousand minimum income schemes” (con M. Jessoula e M. Natili, in Working Paper LPF, 1, 2014); “Beyond continuity? Italian social assistance policies between institutional opportunities and agency” (in International Journal of Social Welfare, 22/1, 2013).

e-mail: ilaria.madama@unimi.it