

Riccardo Cruzzolin (PhD) is Researcher in cultural anthropology at the Department of Political Science of the University of Perugia. He teaches Ethnology in the undergraduate degree program in International Relations and Political Anthropology and Conflicts in the master's degree program in International Relations. His current main research interests include migratory phenomena, popular devotion, urban anthropology, and the process of secularization. In addition to presenting papers at various national and international conferences and participating in several PRIN research projects, he has published in important academic journals including: Mondi migranti, Etnografia e ricerca qualitativa, and Voci. His most recent monograph is: Il Mayordomo e il Caudillo. Forme della presenza nella diaspora peruviana (Aracne, 2019).