

Maria Russo is an Associate Professor of Moral Philosophy at the Vita-Salute San Raffaele University. She is the director of the ECSE (European Centre for Social Ethics), and co-director of PHILM and Studi Sartriani. Her main areas of research are existentialist ethics, media ethics, and film and philosophy. She has published numerous papers in international and national scientific journals (including European Journal of Philosophy, Critical Horizons and the Journal of the British Society for Phenomenology) and several monographs – the last one is Sartre: Vita di un filosofo radicale (Carocci, 2024).